Our petition for a special election in 1910 has almost enough signatures now to give us a majority to hold that election," continued Mr. Wallace. "It will be only a short while before we have our petition ready to present—in fact it is almost ready now."

Several members of the synod said this morning they believed that prohibition would carry in their respective communities.

Thompson and Oliver Sent to Cedar Rapids to Replace the Men Dropped.

W. N. Deatherage, quarterback, and J. C. Lawrence, end, who accompanied the Tigers to Iowa, have been sent home by Coach W. W. Roper. Prof. J. A. Gibson, assistant coach, received word last night to that effect from Coach Roper by long distance telephone from Cedar Rapids, Ia. Proctor Thompson, end, and A. R. Oliver, tackle, have been sent to Cedar Rapids to take their places.

According to Prof. Gibson, Gove will not be able to play in the game next Saturday, for Iowa plays under the rules of the "Big Nine" conference, which forbid graduates playing on teams. This will necessitate a change in the line. Prof. Gibson says Wilder and Oliver will be used in the line. He thinks Thompson will be used as a substitute for Crain.

COUSE HAS PICTURE THERE.

Painter of Indiana Exhibits "Turquoise Bead Maker."

"The Turquoise Bead Maker," by E. T. Couse, is in the exhibition now in the archaeological museum in Academic Hall. Mr. Couse has won favorable comment on his work here in former years. He is primarily a painter of Indian subjects. His work is very strong in its decorative qualities. Very often he gains a desired effect by means of one flat tone against another, so contrasted as to create a harmonious relief in the different parts of the picture. His color scheme is usually in light atmospheric tones.

This year's picture is more realistic than his exhibits of previous years. The bead maker is an Indian of magnificent physique. Mr. Couse painted him in an attitude that brings out the muscular development of the shoulder, back and arms. The bead maker, with his mass of rich, jet hair, circled by a band of white, makes a strong figure against the background. The white and black in the head are repeated in the white moccasins and leggings, and in the black skin rug on which he is squatting. On the floor beside him are the finished beads and the crude tools with which he works.

CLASS-ROOM WORK FOR THE LIBRARIANS

Miss Florence Whittier of Sedalia Is Instructor at Institute Meeting.

STATE SESSION TOMORROW

Practical Demonstrations Are Given in Agricultural Building.

The meeting of the library institute in the new Agricultural building this morning resembled a class-room scene. About fifteen members of the institute spent more than an hour in doing practical class work. Miss Florence Whittier, librarian of the Sedalia, Mo., public library, was the instructor.

The institute is being held in advance of the annual meeting of the Missouri Library association, which will open here tomorrow.

Miss Whittier talked on catalogue entries. Then, using books from the university library, each member catalogued a certain number of books. Miss Whittier gave her personal attention to each member as the work progressed.

This afternoon Miss Bessie E. Tiffany, of the University of Missouri, talked on minor records. She explained the work of the loan desk and shelf fitting and accession work. She used special samples from the university library bureau for demonstration.

At the first meeting of the library institute held yesterday afternoon at the Agricultural building, Miss Elizabeth B. Wales talked on elementary classification. The attendance at this meeting was small, since all of the delegates had not yet arrived.

HE TELLS WHAT TO READ.

H. O. Severance Addresses Members of the Library Institute.

"What Shall I Read?" was the subject of the talk which H. O. Severance, librarian at the University of Missouri, made before the members of the library institute last night.

"This question," said Mr. Severance, "is uppermost in the minds of all men and women who wish to become educated. We need to discriminate in the selection of our books as we do in the selection of our friends—take the best. Read the classics, the writings of the old Greeks and Romans. Read the great epics, such as the 'Divine Comedy' of Dante, the great Catholic epics and Milton's 'Paradise Lost.' Study the tragic poets, Aeschylus, Sophocles, Shakespeare, and do not overlook the great masters of fiction, as Dickens, Eliot and Scott. Read the writings of these masters for their thought, their content, not for their form."

"The Bible is the source-book of great thoughts. Upon it Milton based the plots of his greatest works. Daniel Webster and Lord Macaulay quoted freely from the Bible. It was the Bible that inspired Martin Luther to carry on his great work of reform in defiance of the wrath of the church."

Among the Librarians.

Miss Marguerite McDaniel, of Sedalia, Mo., will come to Columbia Friday to attend the library association.

A. M. Harden, of the St. Louis Medical library, and Austin D. Wolf, librarian at Park College, Parkville, Mo., are members of the institute.

Miss Kathleen A. Riley, librarian of the St. Louis Catholic library, is attending the institute. She has been

WABASH MAY GIVE M. U. SCHOLARSHIPS

The Officials Consider Sending Students to Short Agricultural Course.

VISIT AROUSES INTEREST

President Delano and Party Inspect Equipment and Work of College.

The Wabash railroad is considering a plan to issue scholarships to men on terms along its lines to the short winter term in the College of Agriculture at the University of Missouri.

"We are much interested in your College of Agriculture," said F. A. Delano, of Chicago, president of the Wabash railroad at the Wabash station in Columbia yesterday afternoon. "We are considering the plan for scholarships, but I cannot say now just what has been done."

The president of the Wabash system had just returned from an hour's visit to the University of Missouri's College of Agriculture with a dozen or more Wabash officials who are on their semi-annual tour of inspection of the Wabash lines.

The officials arrived in Columbia on a special train at 3:30 o'clock from Centralia, and departed at 5 for a night's stop at Moberly. They made the trip to the College of Agriculture buildings in three automobiles, accompanied by Dr. A. Ross Hill, president of the University of Missouri, and F. B. Mumford, dean of the College of Agriculture.

Talking Is Serious With Him.

The Wabash executive appeared to be about the youngest and tallest man of the party. His complexion is dark and he wore a modest brown-checked suit. There was an expression of pleasure and satisfaction in his brown eyes. When addressed he would become very serious. Talking evidently is a serious business with the Wabash's president.

Others in the Party.

Other members of the party besides President Delano were Henry Miller, vice-president and general manager; S. E. Cotter, general superintendent; J. D. McNamara, general passenger agent; H. E. Watts, assistant general freight agent; W. A. Hopkins, Western passenger and freight agent; J. O. Robinson, traveling engineer; J. E. Stumpf, division superintendent; J. A. Dacey, master mechanic, and J. W. Jones, trainmaster.

Dean F. B. Mumford, of the College of Agriculture, said last night that the officials were not inclined to talk about the matter of granting scholarships to the College of Agriculture, but that every man in the party expressed an interest in the work of the school and a pleasure in viewing the work as done there. About thirty minutes were spent by the party in going through the various buildings at the farm.

"It is a plan which I like very much," said Dean Mumford, "and I hope the Wabash officials will take some action in the matter. We will know the result of their trip in a few days, at least."

Court Grants Negro Woman Farm for Which She Worked.

After three years of litigation, Harriet McQuitty, an old negro woman, was granted in yesterday's session of the circuit court forty acres of land promised her nearly forty years ago by the late W. When he died in 1905 she brought suit and the case was decided in her favor. The supreme court reversed the decision last June.
